December 1994

Sources of Plant Materials for Land Rehabilitation

by
Steven D. Warren
Gwyn L. Howard
Sara J. White

19950314 043

Military land managers and trainers are charged with planning and implementing land rehabilitation and maintenance to minimize environmental degradation and improve the safety and realism of the training mission. One step in the rehabilitation and maintenance process is to purchase appropriate plant materials, particularly locally endemic or adapted species.

This report contains a list of plant material vendors in each state. Managers and trainers can contact these vendors for solicitation of bids.

Foreword

This study was conducted for the Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, Installation Management (ACSIM) under Project 4A162720A896, "Environmental Quality Technology"; Work Unit T34, "Vegetative Species Selection for Multiple Use Objectives." The technical monitor was Dr. Victor E. Diersing, DAIM-ED-N.

The work was performed by the Environmental Natural Resources Division (EN) of the Environmental Sustainment Laboratory (EL), U.S. Army Construction Engineering Research Laboratories (USACERL). Dr. William Severinghaus is Chief, CECER-EN, and William Goran is Chief, CECER-EL. The USACERL technical editor was Gloria J. Wienke, Information Management Office. The cover illustration was drawn by Lucretia Breazeale.

LTC David J. Rehbein is Commander and Acting Director of USACERL, and Dr. Michael J. O'Connor is Technical Director.

1 Introduction

Background

War, by its very nature, is destructive to the environment. It follows logically that training for war is also destructive to the environment. Environmental ills associated with heavy training include soil compaction, soil erosion, siltation of waterways and wetlands, increased threat of flooding, loss of wildlife habitat, declining biodiversity, and invasion by noxious weeds. Environmental degradation has a negative impact on the training mission as well. Tactical concealment resources are lost. Realism of the natural environment is diminished. Heavily eroded areas become dangerous or impassable with tactical vehicles. Moreover, public outcry over the condition of military training lands jeopardizes the image of the Armed Forces as a capable steward of the land.

As a result of the concerns expressed by military land managers and trainers over the declining condition of training and testing lands, the Army's Integrated Training Area Management (ITAM) program was conceptualized at the U.S. Army Construction Engineering Research Laboratory (USACERL). ITAM has evolved to include land condition and trend analysis (LCTA), environmental awareness (EA), training requirements integration (TRI), and land rehabilitation and maintenance (LRAM).

Both the need for and the interest in LRAM have increased dramatically over the past decade. Among the many difficulties faced in planning and implementing a land rehabilitation project is procurement of appropriate plant materials for revegetation of damaged lands. To satisfy government procurement requirements and ensure a fair and reasonable price for materials, it is usually necessary to identify and solicit bids from multiple vendors. In addition, there is an increasing emphasis on the use of locally endemic or adapted plant species. These factors increase the demand to identify multiple commercial sources of regional or local sources of plant materials.

Objective

The objective of this research was to create a comprehensive and up-to-date list of plant material vendors. The list includes vendors of trees, shrubs, grasses, wildflowers, and wetland plants.

Approach

Researchers began this program by purchasing a vendor list from a company that specializes in extracting and compiling business information from telephone directories. Using the key phrase "seeds and bulbs retail" approximately 3650 businesses were identified across the United States. Researchers called every business on the list to eliminate those that sell only crop seed. The resulting list was cross-referenced with the PMSource plant vendor database maintained by the Soil Conservation Service. Duplicate names were removed and additions from the PMSource were called to verify that they were still in business. Other sources of information include the following:

"1994 Buyers Guide," Land and Water 37(November/December):32-80.

Harker, D., S. Evans, M. Evans, and K. Harker, Landscape Restoration Handbook (Lewis Publishers, Boca Raton, FL, 1993).

International Erosion Control Association, 1993-1994 Products and Services Directory (Steamboat Springs, CO, 1993).

Soil and Water Conservation Society, Sources of Native Seeds and Plants (Ankeny, IA, 1987).

Soil Conservation Service, Directory of Wetland Plant Vendors, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Waterways Experiment Station, Wetlands Research Program Technical Report WRP-SM-1.

Scope

Users of this list of sources should be aware that not all vendors will carry all species. For any given species, it may be necessary to contact a large number of potential vendors. In addition, the availability and price of many species tend to vary seasonally and annually based on growing conditions and supply and demand.
